

CALL FOR PODCAST SPEAKERS

Unraveling the Anthropocene: Race, Environment, and Pandemic

This year the Liberal Arts Collective at Penn State will be running a “conference-style” podcast to feature intellectual, activist, artistic, or community work happening around the contemporary crisis of race, the environment, and the pandemic. We are looking for speakers to have a recorded conversation about the work they are doing to document, alleviate, or understand these crises. Speakers would be volunteering to record a 15-minute long conversation about their work.

The podcast will run during the Fall of 2020 and until the early Spring of 2021. Parallel events include a reading group and a closing roundtable. Podcast speakers may be considered for the final roundtable as well.

- To participate, send a 250 word description of your project and an updated C.V. to libarts.co@gmail.com, with “podcast speaker” as the subject.
- Submissions will be considered throughout the academic year, but those who contact us before October 15th will take priority for Fall episodes.

- <https://sites.psu.edu/liberalartscollective/>
- e-mail: libarts.co@gmail.com
- Tw: @libartsco_psu
- Fb: @libartscollective